RE: Tricia Kalloo, Wellness International & the adidas-Group

I have had the pleasure of knowing and working with Tricia Kalloo and the Wellness International team from an HR and Training & Development perspective since January 2008. I have no hesitation in recommending them to anyone who is focused on improving their balance throughout all things 'Mind Body and Soul'...to be both effective outside and inside the workplace.

In my 12 years with the adidas Group, I have rarely seen anyone make such an instant individual impact on our people than the one that Tricia delivered... right from the initial impact of working with our Employee Development Manager through to the recent plans in giving birth to our 'Passport to Wellness'.

In offering a recommendation for the work that Tricia Kalloo has consistently delivered, the key value-added element is quite simply down to the fact that she makes it her business to fully understand our people and our business needs and pressures.

However, there is so much more to Tricia Kalloo in my eyes than the work she has initiated across the adidas-Group. Tricia is always friendly, approachable, hardworking and relentless in her commitment to sustaining a bottom line impact (both growing her own people and facilitating the personal and professional growth of the adidas-Group employees). Moreover, Tricia has a great habit of developing positive working relationships with everyone she seems to come into contact with. The efforts that both she and her team demonstrated last year surrounding the Microsoft Challenge being arguably one of the finest examples to date.

It remains a genuine pleasure to have the support of Tricia's focused, yet totally flexible approach. May I take this opportunity to thank you for all the fantastic work you have done for the adidas-Group both personally and by supporting myself to professionally develop our people through the philosophy of Mind Body and Soul... different class in my professional opinion throughout the most challenging period the adidas-Group has faced in recent times!
